The ability of the Unangaġ people to thrive in the Aleutian Islands for thousands of years was developed with an understanding of self within place. Our ancestors understood that the natural world operates on reciprocity. It is important to extend our respect beyond human-to-human interactions, to all beings and ecological systems that are necessary in the processes of human life. We believe that through Indigenous perspectives, we can lead a path of healing and restoring environmental balances. In this year's decorating contest, we ask you to carry on the knowledge passed down from our ancestors and demonstrate our unity with nature.
